EAGLE BANK INTRODUCES TEEN CHECKING

Brentwood, MO- Eagle Bank is now offering a checking account for teens, the MiAccount. “We believe that financial education takes place at home and out of the classroom” says CEO Michael Walsh, “teens need hands-on experience to gain the practical financial knowledge they’ll need when they leave home or go on to college.”

Eagle Bank has joined with several local public and private schools to assist in their required financial education curriculums as guest speakers and mentors on specific topics such as student loans, the importance of establishing credit and maintaining high credit scores.

The MiAccount functions just like a checking account with some added features. When the student opens the account, they have the option of a personal banker walking them through the basics of how to write a check and balance their account. A parent or guardian is required to sign on the account with them and will receive a copy of the statement by email every month; this is to encourage parents to help their teen learn good spending habits.
